A mouse, hiding in a hole in the wall, was scarred of venturing out where a huge tomcat was poised to catchit.

After an hour, the purring sounds stopped, and the mouse could only hear the sound of a rooster crowing. "I can go out now" the mouse thought. The danger is gone.

Unfortunately, the cat was still patiently waiting for its prey. He pounced on the mouse, gobbled it up and tured to a kitten, saying, "you see, being a bilingual has its advantages!"
