Jose Mujica is known as the world's poorest president, but the one-time guerrilla revolutionary has chosen to shun the state's grand presidential home for his wife's (1) ramshackle farmhouse. He chooses to give 90% of his monthly salary to charities supporting the poor and small businesses. Some people consider that this is nothing else but a smart marketing campaign to (2) endear Mujica with Uruguayâ€™s low-income voters.

"If you don't have many possessions then you don't need to work all your life like a slave to sustain them, and therefore you have more time for yourself," he explains of lifestyle. He also exemplifies his environmental views: At a world summit this summer, he asked whether Earth has "enough resources so seven or eight billion can have the same level of consumption and waste that is seen in rich societies today?"

Mujica accuses most world leaders of having a "blind obsession to achieve growth with consumption, as if the contrary would mean the end of the world".

Mujica said that the end of the world would mean the end of the world. He said that the end of the world would mean the end of the world. He said that the end of the world would mean the end of the world.

Those who know him affirm that Jose Mujica has always been this way: humble, (A) austere and self-sacrificing. Perhaps the (B) vicissitudes of armed warfare and later, years of jail, fostered in him an appreciation of simple things.

Jose Mujica

Jose Mujica is a Uruguayan politician and businessman. He has been the President of Uruguay since 2010. He is known for his humble and self-sacrificing nature. He has been a member of the Tupac Katari Movement and the National Liberation Army of Uruguay.

But this doesn't mean he's a popular president. In fact, his (C) approval rating has dipped below 50% after two controversial decisions: signing a bill to allow abortions during the first 12 weeks of pregnancy and supporting a debate on the legalization of marijuana.

However, he doesn't have to worry too much about his popularity rating. According to Uruguayan law, he is not allowed to seek re-election in 2014. Also, at 77, he is likely to retire from politics altogether (3) before long.
