Heyy, my kindest Lin of all Lins!

Yes, we are right at the problem: none of these situations can be applied here... Maybe I am too complex...

Actually there is an other interesting fact: among my writings the ones that are closest to me are in a series: in these ones someone tells a story to an other one, and they keep on analyzing the stories being told. In other words I keep myself and my narrator as far from the real stories as I can. - Maybe these two animals that represent so much of the unconscious are fighting just for this, I keep myself away from this fight as I keep myself away from the real stories, from real confrontations (because writers are identified with their works), finally: from real life.

Anyway, thanks for the interesting site!
