

Forum: Words, Words! All About Words ĭ¼~éƒ½æ~æ-ță—æƒ¹çš„ç!•ĭ¼•ĭ¼%o

Topic: The Letter "T"

Subject: Re: The Letter "T"

Posted by: courtesy

Posted on: 2007/4/7 11:38:06

Quote:

Apex wrote:

Taunt

Mine are effective

Oops, I forgot to give a definition of this word, so here it is.

Taunt = a remark made in order to provoke someone. And provoke means to stimulate or incite someone to do or feel something.

My taunt are effective only if you feel provoked by them. So in other words, they have strength or "bite", if you will, only when you let it. Otherwise, they will just drop to the ground and die. Now I'm sure all of you smart and educated people have seen my taunts and have ignored them, and that's what you should do. After all, you don't want to incriminate yourself by answering to them, right?

On the other hand, I never answer to or even look twice on taunts myself, I just show them my soles and keep on going. Because if I am provoked by it, then the taunt was effective on me. Ignorance is the best weapon against taunts.

wa! wa! wa! I should address you as Saint Apex lor. he he