Hi Aspirant,

Actually I'm not a qualified person to answer such theoretical questions in a well organized way. International trade was not my major when I was in school though I've been working in the field for quite a few years. I'm but an ordinary merchant knowing how to distribute my products into a targeted market and how to perform smoothly the purchase/sale contracts attained from my overseas customers and suppliers. I really don't know what The Law of Comparative Advantage is and neither can I tell the pro-and-con details about free trade or arguments on trade restrictions.

I believe your questions are of fundamental knowledge in international trade. I'm sure you can easily find their answers in an entry-leveled textbook outlining what international trade is about.

Sorry for not being able to render a materialized help.
