

Forum: Chinese 詞語 - 詞語

Topic: 詞語

Subject: 詞語

Posted by: Anonymous

Posted on: 2006/11/16 18:09:44

Yet another expressive phrase ... majestic mountains, lofty peaks; trees and bamboos in their stupendous growth ... all these in the likes of an awesome arcadia. Where can one find such tranquility?

Could this be part of a couplet? If so, what is the antithetical distich?

Going by the rules as Guru Glotynn has mentioned previously, the phrase seems to be the second part of a couplet (if it is the compose of a couplet at all), as the ending word 詞 is in the first phonetic tone.

Over to our pool of experts.