I realize that the chat room is under use for the purpose of communication be it in English or other languages....As for me, I strongly feel that the chat room is one of the source of place where one's English can be improved progressively.

Furthermore, it will be fun place to learn if we communicate positively....

There are many chat rooms, but how many are productive enough to make it a successfully. Although some may be popular but somehow they die off quickly of which I don't know the reason/s why. I have to admit that my English is just average but without practice....I am back to square one....and I will be afraid to express myself in the event that i need to use English as an instrument of communication.

I urge members here to try out the room, after all there is no harm in trying it out.
