

Forum: Bulletin Board i¼^ä½^å'Sæ¬,i¼%o

Topic: chatroom

Subject: Re: chatroom

Posted by: wolfy

Posted on: 2013/9/4 17:24:42

Agreeing with each other about learning a language is a positive thing or sign, but the ultimate importance of it all is to participate into the language.

We are not here to judge one's learning ability, but more so to share and assist in learning a foreign language (ie, in this case...English), hopefully they will improve progressively. However, please one must not be shy to make a mistake here, it is only from the mistake that we can try to help correct the mistake in order for them to progress and not to make the same mistake again.

But how do we know where we stand in terms of the level of our English....its simple, just practice consistently with the fellow members here, and one is not still not sure of the answer....remember to ask.

One more method to improve is to learn speak more often, and members can find a website that allows voice conferencing....Again, let me remind those who wish to learn must try to speak out even if it doesn't comes out correctly...it is still alright because i am sure the learned ones is there too assist.

Finally, one word of advice..."Rome was not build in one day"...in other words....it takes time to progress.