Hey, Dagege, you surprised me on this late hour! For days I did not feel like watching an english language video, but this story is really great! It recalls 'A Hundred Years of Solitude', there in a part the inhabitants of that village start to forget the name of objects, in order to avoid total oblivion they label all objects around... Besides, I have a great idea! Danke schÄ¶n!

Ok, I don't know if you still try to read in Chinese. I found a site, you can read free Marquez, Melville, Calvono, Hemingway, Agatha Cristie and many others... Here is something funny for you:

Hahaha ... it's a pity, that I cannot understand Hungarian. Your individual story about ... what I guess (?) ... learning ... should be really interesting.

But maybe you just "fake" a speech - knowing that nobody here can understand what you try to tell us ... ;P

Here a short story of Peter Bichsel a guy from Switzerland "Ein Tisch ist ein Tisch". Maybe you know it ...

... here in English ... but please take care ... things can get dangerous ...
