

Forum: Pronunciation  $\text{ĩ}^{\frac{1}{4}}\text{ç}^{\text{TM}\frac{1}{4}}\text{é}\ddot{\text{Y}}^{\frac{3}{4}}\text{ĩ}^{\frac{1}{4}}\text{‰}$

Topic: now, noun

Subject: Re: now, noun

Posted by: montanius

Posted on: 2015/5/5 5:48:11

<http://www.iciba.com/now###>

<http://www.iciba.com/noun>

As I hear 'n' in the end of 'noun' is really weaker than the first one. But it is the same in phonetic symbols as 'nun' in which the 'n' can be heard more clearly:

<http://www.iciba.com/nun>

Anyway, in all cases you can pronounce a strong 'n', a much stronger than in æ-£ or çœÿ etc., it is like in å¹'.

But these are such tiny differences, if you don't want to read up Shakespeare's sonettes, it does not matter.