I am Wenshin Lin. Sophia is my English name. I am eighteen years old, studying in a public girls' high school. I come from a well-to-do family. My father works in a bank and mother works in a bookstore. I am the only child in the family; however, I am not the so-called spoiled child. My parents make very sure of that by training me to be independent.

Throughout my academic career, I have not only getting god grades but also being very active on sport field and in various societies. I play volleyball and enjoy the team spirit. I have joined the drama club and participated in many speech English contests. I really like to take part in school activities. Through them I make may friends, have lots of fun, and gain many valuable experiences.

I have been the class English tutor for almost three years. I love to discuss and share the experience of learning English with my classmates. We often read China Post and Time Magazine, and then discuss the content, word usage and practice speaking English on the basis of the English materials. At the beginning we found it was quite hard because we could hardly understand what the content was about, but we encouraged each other not to give up. Gradually we found that we had made improvement, which made us extremely excite. Later the group discussion of English books and magazines has become one of the most enjoyable things for us every week. Thanks to all these experiences, I won the first prize for school English speech contest in my second year of high school and many of my English articles had been published on China Post.

My fondness of English has been developed since my childhood. Being the only child, I was lonely, with no one to play with. My mother understood how I felt, so she brought me with her all the time. Hence the bookstore where my mom worked my childhood playground, and books have been my playmates since then. When we were in the bookstore, my mom would show me those fancy books with cute illustrations on it. At first I was drawn by the pictures and then curious about those strange symbols called words. This was my first contact with English. As I was interested in knowing what those symbols meant, my parents taught me a bit. After they felt that I was eager to learn, they found me an English tutor. By starting learning English at really early age, I had an advantage in learning it. And I have to thank my parents for this.

My interest in English brought me to the world of English literature. I have been enchanted by the creative world since then, so I decided to major in English literature. My aim is to explore the world of literature and the world of great writers and thus to open my eyes and cultivate my mind.

I am Xia-dung Fang; my English name is Matthew. I am seventeen years old, studying in a private high school. There are five people in my family. My father is a military officer and my mother is a housewife. Both of my younger brother and sister are junior high school students. You might think that my family is traditional and strict. However, it is the opposite. My parents are open-minded and have a good sense of humor. I must say I am lucky to grow up in this happy family.

My father certainly has a great influence on me. I always look up to him. His passion and dedication to the family is the best thing he gives us. He never forces us children to do things we don' like. He encourages us to make our own decisions. That's why I can join a lot of school activities and have the chance to develop my hobbies.

I have been very active in school activities. I am one of the computer freaks who just can't take my eyes off the computer screen. My friends know I am good at computer, so once there computers have some problems, they will come to me. I am also a pitcher on the school baseball team. Our team has won many, many matches and we thus gained the title "unbeatable team.― I believe this is resulted form our constant practice, hard work, and our strong team spirit.

Although computer and baseball take up most of my leisure time, I manage to use some spare time to play the electronic guitar in a band. I use computer to make many of our songs into MIDI files and forward them to many of my friends. My friends love them and think them awesome. Nothing can make me more proud of myself than to be able to combine my computer skills with music. Don't get me wrong. I didn't neglect my study when I take part in so many activities. Unless my grades in school are OK, my parents won't let me do all these.

I have been interested in computer since I was in the fifth grade of elementary school. At that time my father had a big computer on his desk. Every time I saw how concentrated my father was while using the computer, I was full of admiration. So I said to myself: "Some day, I am going to be like that.― Later my father gave me a new computer, and ever since then, I was addicted to computer, especially after the emergence of the Internet. In fact, surfing the net has become my greatest interest.

The e-commerce has changed our traditional form of life style. Take my case for example: I keep in touch with my friends through email; I send my greetings through e-cards; I buy books from e-bookstore; I shop at many websites and search information through searching engines.

Not to mention how the e-era has bought the most powerful reform to the business world. Banks and stock markets, as well as companies, do transaction through the net, and the space and time limitation no longer exist. I am fascinated with the new change and eager to take part in it. So I have decided to major in Computer and Information Science. I want to be a professional computer programmer who creates and designs the software to meet the needs of people in the e-era.
